SIEGEL-GALLAGHER GOOGLES UP MADISON OFFICE SPACE FOR GOOGLE

Siegel-Gallagher's Tenant Services team recently represented Google in a 5,000 square foot lease transaction at Harvester Plaza, 301 S. Blount Street, in downtown Madison, Wisconsin.

Craig Stanley of Siegel-Gallagher said, "It was a pleasure to assist Google in establishing its first Wisconsin office. I believe that innovative companies see the greater Madison community and its connection to the University of Wisconsin's talent a key factor in our high-tech economy."

Google, a leader in organizing the world's information, will occupy most of the top floor the building. Harvester Plaza is a historical building being redeveloped by The Rifken Group as loft office space. Google chose the facility for its unique character to help promote its culture and future operations.

Craig Stanley of Siegel-Gallagher's Madison office and Scott Flanagan of Warren Wixen Real Estate Services, Los Angeles, California, represented Google in the transaction, while The Rifken Group represented themselves.
